My name is Fred Wahl. I am a sought after immigration consultant and author, the "Visa Coach" . For 36 years I've done the heavy lifting for fiancée's and spouses, doing their immigration paper work, and Personally guiding them to obtain Visas and Green Cards. quickly and effortlessly, without hi fees, complications or denials.

I offer a FREE 15 minute telephone consultation to discuss eligibility and strategy, and how I can personally help bring your love home, as fast and effortlessly as possible.

Call 1-800-806-3210 x 710 to speak with me directly.

The Interview is the MOST important and critical step. Success or failure ride on the judgment that the consular or homeland security officer makes.

I prefer to "stack the deck" in my clients favor, by going the extra mile during the initial document preparation stage, and submitting my famous "front loaded presentation". The officer is required to review the petition and all evidences before the interview. My plan is to answer the officer's questions in advance, telling your story, in a clear, logical and persuasive fashion. What then happens, is normally, a short and sweet interview. Not much left to talk about.

For more details about my signature "front loaded" petitions visit <http://www.visacoach.com/front-loaded-petition.html>

This is what couples just like you, say about the "Visa Coach"

I had pretty good knowledge of the visa process before contacting Fred Wahl, because I'd lived outside the US for five years, and talked to many other people who'd gone through the process. But despite this knowledge -- or perhaps because of it -- I knew that I needed help.

Fred's service, expertise, and thoroughness was top-notch. He guided us along every step, and provided tons of valuable insight, tips, and advice. The K-1 petition he prepared was superb, and I have no doubt that the quality of the package we submitted made a big difference in our approval.

In fact, we completed the entire process -- from first submission to visa approval at the US Embassy in Manila -- in just over two months.

I turned my search to the immigration experts. Fred Wahl came up on my search. I emailed Fred and Fred answered. I called Fred and Fred answered his phone. I was shocked. No assistant, no receptionist, no red tape. Just Fred and his US Immigration expertise. A real human answers

Carlo & Jayme

We just wanted to let you know how excited and thankful we are to you for helping us and everything you did during this K-1 visa application. Your attention to detail is impeccable, your answer to emails & phone calls were always very supportive and helped guide us in the proper direction.

You help us with the correct documents at the right time to make everything work. You also help us through the procedure in a very professional way with courtesy and kindness. As being together we owe that to you. We are so thankful for all you have done.

The Consulate Interview

The final part of the visa petition process is a face to face interview between a Consular official and your Fiancee or Spouse. This interview is usually very brief and direct. Many interviewees feel the consular official insensitive, cold, even rude.

The official is tasked to look for fraud. This is the last hurdle before the visa is issued and the last chance for the Consulate to catch any irregularities that were not spotted before.

He plans to determine whether in "his opinion" , the Fiancee is of good character, and the relationship is genuine. The official may ask her a number of questions on her background and the relationship. He is seeking to trip her up to catch "sham marriages" by couples who fraudulently marry solely for the purpose of obtaining the visa.

The time leading up to the interview can be very stressful for the Fiancee. On one hand she is nervous about saying something wrong, and on the other hand, awakens to the fact that the process is almost over, and soon she will really be abandoning home, family and culture to travel alone to a strange and possibly lonely place. The American Fiance should work with her calming her fears and helping practice and ready answers for the questions she might be asked.

The Fiancee should provide clear and honest answers to all questions. She should be confident in her commitment to the relationship, be truthful, answer questions in with good detail and not appear overly nervous.

The Fiancee should review the documents and evidence's that the Sponsor has previously submitted. Her answers must be consistent with the documents already filed.

Ideally she is able to respond fluently in both English and her native language.

To help build your Fiancee or Spouse's confidence, and to help the interview go smoothly, review the following questions with your Fiancee, until she knows the answers, and can speak them clearly and confidently.
